

Campus Connect

ROLE OF YOUTH IN NATION BUILDING

“THE YOUTH OF TODAY ARE THE LEADERS OF TOMORROW”

Youth are the future and strength of a nation. Their energy, creativity, and new ideas can bring great progress to society. When young people work with dedication and responsibility, they help in building a strong and developed country.

Young people play an important role in spreading education, awareness, and social values. If the youth join hands (work together), they can solve many social problems and bring positive change in society. They can also lead the way by setting good examples for others.

Youth can take part in social activities such as cleanliness drives, helping the poor, and protecting the environment. By doing this, they show that actions speak louder than words.

Young entrepreneurs like Ritesh Agarwal started successful companies at a young age and created job opportunities. Young athletes like Neeraj Chopra inspire the youth by bringing pride to the country through international achievements.

Therefore, if the youth are educated, responsible, and hardworking, they can truly become the backbone of the nation and help build a bright future for the country.

Today's teachers not only give knowledge but also help students develop skills like creativity, critical thinking, and the ability to use technology.

With the help of digital learning platforms and modern teaching methods, teachers guide students to explore new ideas and innovations. Education in the 21st century encourages students to think outside the box and become problem solvers.

For example, many young people today learn coding, robotics, and digital skills in schools. These skills help them become future scientists, entrepreneurs, and leaders.

Therefore, teachers in the 21st century act as mentors and guides, helping the youth become responsible, skilled, and confident citizens who can contribute to the progress of the nation.

Ms. Nalini Garg
TGT Social Science

Campus Connect

A TALE OF COURAGE

Pets are our good friends. They love us and make us happy. Cats purr and dogs wag their tails to show care.

In Green Valley High School, everyone loved the pets. Whiskers was a fluffy orange cat who slept in the library. Paws was a friendly golden retriever who played in the playground.

They were like family to the students and teachers.

Whiskers purred on laps to make people happy, and Paws wagged his tail and fetched balls.

But one day, things changed. A group of boys, led by Rex, started being mean.

They pulled Whiskers' tail and tripped Paws just for fun. Rex and his friends — Jake, Tom and Mike — thought it was a game.

They hid in corners, yanked the pets' ears, and recorded videos to share online.

"Look at the silly cat!" Rex laughed. Whiskers hissed and ran away. Paws whimpered but didn't fight back.

The pets got scared and hid more. The school felt sad.

Teachers saw the problem but couldn't find who was doing it. No one spoke up because Rex's gang bullied anyone who tried.

Then, fifth class students formed a team called the Pet Protectors.

Mia was the smart leader who loved animals. Ravi was good with computers. Arjun was fast and strong.

Priya drew plans. Karan told stories to inspire them.

They all cared for Whiskers and Paws, feeding them and playing with them after school.

When they saw Paws limping with a sore tail, they decided to stop the bullies. "We must help our friends,"

Mia said in a secret meeting. Ravi showed camera footage. "I have proof — it's Rex and his gang." Priya drew a plan.

"Confront them during recess with lots of kids around for safety." Arjun would distract Rex with a race.

The others would record and talk.

The next day, recess started. Arjun challenged Rex to a run. "Bet you can't beat me!" Rex agreed and ran off with his friends.

Mia, Ravi, Priya and Karan found Whiskers under a bench and Paws in the bushes. "Stop hurting them!" Mia shouted.

Jake asked, "What do you want?"

Ravi played the video. "We know you pull their tails and trip them. It's not fun — it's bullying." The crowd gasped.

Priya said, "Animals feel pain. You are mean to them for no reason."

Rex heard and came back, angry. "You can't mess with us!"

Karan stood up. "No, you stop. We'll tell the principal and share this online. Pets are part of our school — treat them right!"

The gang looked scared. Kids whispered, "Leave the pets alone!"

Even Rex's friends felt bad. Rex gave up. "Okay, it was just a joke."

The Protectors knew they won. The school started a patrol to watch the pets.

Whiskers and Paws were happy again. The Protectors became heroes, showing that bravery means protecting the weak.

Green Valley learned that real strength is in kindness, not hurting others. Whiskers and Paws always remembered their guardians.

Moral — True courage means standing up against cruelty and protecting those who cannot protect themselves...

Yashvee

V - E

Editor & Coordinator: Mr. Chetan Saluja

0161-2225133

BCM SCHOOL, CHD ROAD

@bcm32a